" The New Ceylon." Being a Sketch of British North Borneo, or Sabah. By JOSEPH HAT-TON. London : Chapman and Hall.

This work is a description of the new British North Bornso Company's territory compiled by the author from information placed at his disposal by the Company. Any sketch from Mr. Hatton's facile pen is sure to be lively and entertaining, and he has succeeded, out of rather little volume to the public, especially that portion Sugar Refining Company, are among the best of it in search of unexplored regions of the earth, where some novelty may be expected, or a new enterprise founded. When we say stender material it must be understood that reference is story of Sir John Pope Hennessy's madate the fact that as yet North Borneo has only been partially explored, and that its resources are still imp. lootly known. Nevertheless Mr. Hatton shows very satisfactorily that what is known is of a very favourable character. North Borneo is shown by the admirable map attached to the book to be in shape that of an irregular triangle, two belong to the past. He has hung on the sides washed by the sea, with a coast line 500 miles in extent. No other part of Borneo is sofavourably-situated-for-trade, none possesses such fine years, during which he has done great mis- harbours. It lies nearly midway between this chief and no real good that would not have Colony and Singapore. Gaya Bay and Sandakan are among the finest harbours in the world, and so late as August last the first notification of another harbour named Kudat was sent home by Commander Johnstone, of the Egeria, which now for the first time appears in the Admiralty charts. It has been decided to establish a residency in Marada Bay overlooking Kudat harbour. A despatch dated August 29th, 1881. says, in reference to this new harbour :--Anyone entering Kudat cannot fail to be struck with the commodiousness of the harbour and the eligibility of the site selected for the future town. I am assured that there is 6 of a square mile of deep water anchorage, that is, with a depth of not under five fathoms at low water. Scarcely any clearing will be required on the proposed town site for some time, and there will therefore be probably less sickness to contend with at first than is usually to be expected on opening a new station. Water will be obtained by means of wolls as at Labuan and Alai. Mr. Everett, in his report on harbours, has reported highly in favour of Kudat.

It seems that the country inland abounds in gutta percha, india rubber, ebony, &c., and coal is reported to exist there also. Consequently

It is in its rich soil and fine climate, however. that the wealth of North Bornes will be found to exist. With the exception of the production Joseph's College will take place at the Cathelie by the natives of rice, millet, tapioca, maize, sugar-cane, tobacco, cotton, pepper, and various vegetables, nothing is raised, and most of the land lies fallow or is covered with valuable timber. It has been ascertained that coffee will thrive exceptionally well there, and it is believed that provo a rival to Caylon. Tea can also be cultivated with success on the slopes of the mountain Kina Balu, while tobacco of a quality certainly equal to any grown in the Philippines can be successfully raised. Camphor abounds in some parts, sugar and spices can be produced; and is known that gold and coal both exist in paying quantities; while the pearl fisheries on the coast will at no distant date prove a source of considerable wealth to the Company. Altogether considering its great value-owing to the noble barbours it possesses—as a naval station and its rich and varied resources, it is not surprising that the British Government felt they would not to lift 150 tons per day, and should therefore cast it away. St. John relates the following dramatic in-

The natives tell a story of a certain chief, who was a great trader, and fond of sailing a prahu from Sulu to Manila. During the course of his voyages, he made the acquaintance of an English merchant, who had, on various occasions, trusted him with goods and treated him very liberally, not an unusual circumstance in the East. At last the chief took to gam. oling, and squandered all his property, sold his houses, his slaves, and at last losts large sum and was obliged find a ship. to place his wife and children in pawn as security. The only property he had preserved was a favourite slave-boy, and with him he started in a small cance to the oyster banks. There they remained fishing, and had varied enocess, but every day increasing the amount in the hollow bamboo in which the natives other fuhermen, who delighted to recount the story of slation was one of the Rhenish Missionaries in actually brought in its oyster into a cance, but had alipped from the fingers of the incautious captor. The natives declare that the oysters containing the largest pearls are always open, until you approach them, and that by cautiously peering into the water they may be seen. One day the slave boy was preparing to dive, when he started back, touched his master's sleeve, and with signs of great emotion pointed into the water; he i with the men who attacked them, pould not speak. The chief looked and there, seven mer, rose quickly to the surface, and was helped into in size, and of an extraordinary shape. They pulled back to Sulu, and solling all his smaller pearls, the chief redeemed his wife and children, and set sail for Manila. There he went to the house of his English friend and said: "Take this poorl, clear off my debt, give mo what you like in return, I shall be satisfied."
